

JACOB KONZE

Finance Major | University of Nevada, Reno

Career Aspirations

Hello, my name is Jacob Konze, and I am currently a Finance major in my first semester of my junior year at the University of Nevada, Reno. While I am still exploring specific career paths within business, I plan to utilize the university's career center to gain further insight and guidance.

Outside of traditional business careers, my long-term goal is to become a commissioned officer in the United States Air Force, with the aspiration of flying aircraft. Aviation has been a passion of mine since childhood, and serving as a pilot has been a lifelong dream. Achieving this goal requires completing my bachelor's degree and meeting all commissioning and testing requirements, including the ASVAB.

Technical Background

I consider myself above average in computer proficiency compared to most students, though not formally trained in IT. Much of my experience comes from hands-on problem solving through gaming, where I frequently troubleshoot issues, modify files, and adjust system settings.

I built and configured my own computer, relying on resources such as YouTube and Google to guide the process. I am also moderately proficient in Microsoft Excel, which I occasionally use in a professional setting. While I regularly use social media, my strengths lie more in practical technology use rather than advanced technical specialization.

Hobbies & Personal Interests

I am originally from Carson City, Nevada, where I was born and raised. I chose the University of Nevada, Reno because it was affordable through scholarships, close to home, and allowed me to pursue my academic goals without relocating far from family.

My hobbies include gaming, hiking, nature walks, and biking, both around town and on mountain trails. I am a dedicated football fan and proudly support the Green Bay Packers. I also have a strong interest in aviation and history, subjects I have studied independently since childhood.

My favorite aircraft include the F/A-18 Super Hornet and the Spitfire. I enjoy listening to rap music, helping others when possible, and traveling. Ultimately, my dream is to become a professional pilot, with the goal of flying for Delta Airlines.
